Talk on writing and submitting papers

Drs. William Ott, Mark Tomforde, Zachary Kilpatrick, and Annalisa Quaini
Department of Mathematics, University of Houston

Friday, Oct 11, 2013

2-3 pm
SEC 102

This talk aims at delineating the important aspects of the effective creation and communication of mathematical writing. How to be creative in generating curiosity and motivation among readers, way to provide proper context to your thesis, the essential skills required to master the celebrated ways of writing mathematics, and how to write an effective letter of submission, are some of the issues this talk will be centered on.

The talk will begin with Dr. Ott addressing the audience for first 10 minutes and then the panel faculty members will answer questions from the audience.

Pizza will be served 15 minutes prior to the seminar
